REPORT ON SECOND PPNN CONFERENCE FOR DIPLOMATS

GUERNSEY

11-14 MAY 1990

Background

Among the motivations of the Programme for Promoting Nuclear Non-Proliferation (PPNN) were perceived needs to both educate the younger generation of diplomats and government officials about the many facets of nuclear non-proliferation and to provide delegations to the 1990 NPT Review Conference with background material and briefings relevant to it. The PPNN program envisaged holding four such meetings for these purposes. The first, aimed at working level officials from capitals, took place in Guernsey from 14-17 May 1989. The second, aimed at key Permanent Representatives to the IAEA, took place in Vienna on 18 and 19 November 1989. The third, aimed at working level diplomats from missions to the United Nations organisations in Geneva is the subject of the current report. The final meeting, aimed at key Permanent Representatives to the United Nations organisations in Geneva, will take place in Geneva on 25 June 1990.

The second PPNN Guernsey Conference for Diplomats was designed to help working level officials from Geneva, especially those with little experience of the nuclear non-proliferation subject area, prepare for the 1990 NPT Review Conference which starts on 20 August. More specifically, it aimed to accomplish the following tasks:

- a) Brief participants on the history, background and rationale of the NPT;
- b) Enable participants to discuss the issues likely to dominate debate at the conference with experts in the area, particularly those with experience of previous NPT review conferences;
- c) Enable participants to establish contact and exchange views with others at their level likely to attend the August NPT review conference.

Participation

Letters were sent out in February, 1990 to the Ambassadors in Geneva of 61 parties to the NPT, inviting each of them to nominate a participant to attend the Guernsey conference. Selection was on the basis of inviting states who had not attended the previous conference, together with a small number of key states which had sent nominees to the 1989 Guernsey conference. 39 nominees from 37 states accepted the invitation, but only 36 of these were able to attend the meeting (see Annex 1). For nominees from East European and developing countries,

PPNN provided a round trip air ticket from Geneva to Guernsey. It also covered the hotel expenses of all participants. Almost all of those attending fitted the profile of the persons PPNN primarily sought to reach: working level diplomats currently involved in nuclear non-proliferation questions, relatively new to the area and likely to be members of national delegations to the 1990 NPT review conference.

Conference Approach and Organisation

All participants were housed in the Old Government House Hotel, Guernsey, British Channel Islands, and all events took place in its conference facilities. The majority flew out from Geneva to the island and returned on the same flights, enabling a group rate to be obtained.

The conference was opened by a keynote address from the President-elect of the NPT review conference, Ambassador de Rivero of Peru, followed by panel presentations and discussion on the mechanics of review conferences and the specific issues likely to be encountered in Geneva in August. Subsequently, participants divided into three working groups, and over the next one and a half days each was addressed in turn by three specialised briefing teams, dealing with the disarmament, peaceful uses of atomic energy and regional conflict issues likely to be encountered during the review conference. These briefings were followed by extensive exchanges within the group. The meeting then ended with plenary sessions involving the chairpersons of each briefing group providing summaries of the discussions in their respective areas, and a presentation on the procedural aspects of the 1995 NPT extension conference.

The schedule of the conference is outlined in Annex 2, which also gives the composition of the briefing teams. These were smaller than in 1989 as a consequence of adverse comments made then about the size and intimidatory nature of the teams used in that year. The only ~~members~~ from outside the PPNN Core Group who participated were Mr Derek Boothby (~~Assistant~~ Secretary General, 1990 NPT review conference), Mr.N.Kossov (Disarmament Specialist at the USSR Embassy in London), Professor John Redick and Mr Michael Wilmshurst (Director of External Relations, IAEA). The working group chairpersons were assisted by three rapporteurs: Drs. Darryl Howlett and Fred Tanner and Mr Andrew Barlow. Administrative support for the conference was the responsibility of a team led by Mrs Carol Willison. She was assisted by Mrs Sandra Wilkins and two Ph.D students from Southampton, Simon Crowe and Helen Leigh.

Finance

The budget for the conference, based on an event in Geneva, was for $30,000 in meeting costs and $6,000 in travel costs, making a total of $36,000. We anticipate that overall expenditure will not exceed this overall budget figure, though travel costs will exceed the original budget figure.

Evaluation of the Conference

Participants at this conference had a much more even level of knowledge on the nuclear non-proliferation field than in 1989, and as a consequence debates were rather more informed and animated than in that year. The innovations introduced this year as a result of last years experiences - smaller core group teams and a session on the mechanics of the conference - worked extremely well. Indeed it was clear that the session on mechanics and procedures could have lasted twice as long had time been available.

Many delegates from developing countries emphasised the value of the meeting in their preparations for the review conference, where they will in several cases be the sole person responsible for preparing their national position. Above all, it enabled many delegates to meet together in an informal, academic atmosphere before the start of the NPT review conference, and make contacts which they can use in the course of it. The view was expressed that more efforts of this type would be needed in advance of the 1995 extension conference.

The provision of briefing material, in the form of a bound volume of articles, was much appreciated. It was made clear that the volume of our PPNN Briefing Book containing documents relevant to the review conference will become an indispensable aid to delegates, as no other conference document will provide them with all the basic reference material they require in one spiral-bound package.

A selection of letters from delegates evaluating the conference is included as Annex 3. These support the view that the conference fully met the objectives set for it.

Dear John,

I should like to congratulate you on the most successful seminar held by the Programme for Promoting Nuclear Non-Proliferation in Guernsey. It was an excellent combination of good speakers, good paperwork, good organisation and delightful hospitality and surroundings. I myself learnt a lot in preparation for the NPT Review Conference, and I have the impression the other participants felt the same. I am sure this sort of preparatory informal seminar before a major conference is of real practical value. Many thanks to yourself, Ben Sanders and to the University of Southampton for organising it and for inviting me to attend. I now look forward to the follow-up one day's meeting in Geneva on 25 June.

Yours sincerely,

Dear John:

I would like to express my appreciation for having had the opportunity again this year to participate in the Guernsey Conference for Diplomats of the Programme for Promoting Nuclear Non-Proliferation. I believe strongly that the two Guernsey conferences of last year and this have helped to increase understanding of the NPT and its role in strengthening international security.

I hope that you will be able to find the necessary financial resources to continue the Programme over the next five years. This will be an even more critical period in which the Programme's activities could play an important role in ensuring the NPT's prolongation. If there is anything I can do to help, please let me know.

Thanks once again for your efforts and congratulations on a job well done. I look forward to seeing you in Geneva in August.

Sincerely,

Dear Dr. Simpson,

Back in Helsinki, I wish to thank you, your colleagues and all those who made this year's Conference on Guernsey such a successful event. One cannot but admire your ability to gather the leading personalities in the nuclear non-proliferation field to give their contribution and guidance in the framework of a well-planned Conference programme for those who may find themselves formulating their countries' positions on issues before the next NPT Review Conference and beyond.

The discussions - in the plenaries, in the working groups and undoubtedly also in other pleasant facilities of the Old Government House Hotel - certainly touched upon the most relevant issues before the international community in this field. Immersion into this subject matter, supported by excellent documentation and personal exchanges of view is a unique way of preparation for the tasks ahead. In brief, the Guernsey Conference has given a lot to think about and to share.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Sir,

I have the honour to write you this letter to express to you and to the University of Southampton my deep gratitude for the opportunity you gave me to participate to the second Conference on nuclear proliferation issues.

Those four days in the beautiful Guernsey were very positive for me. I discovered a lot of aspects and elements that I was ignoring in the field of the nuclear non proliferation.

I tied new relationship not only with diplomats but also with several persons coming from different horizons. I would like to add that the organisation was perfect and the greeting was more than warm.

As I benefited greatly from your Conference, I hope you will be able to organise regularly such seminar to give to other diplomats the occasion to have the same experience I had.

Please accept, Dear Sir, the assurance of my highest consideration.

Dear Dr. Simpson:

While I am still digesting the large amount of information gleaned at the recent Guernsey Conference on nuclear non-proliferation, I wanted to thank you and the other principals in the Programme for Promoting Nuclear Non-Proliferation for the opportunity to participate in such a valuable event.

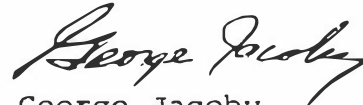

Everything contributed to a first-rate and timely exchange of views: the superb organization; the wonderfully relaxed surroundings; the variety of participants and the erudition of the experts. The receptive hospitality and the very fortunate weather also did their share.

I believe the conference accomplished its principal goal of sensitizing participants to the value of the NPT and the crucial importance of a successful NPT Review conference in August. While differences of perspective and emphasis emerged at the conference on various aspects relating to the NPT, the fact that there could be an informal exchange of views in a positive atmosphere may improve chances for agreement in August at the more formal inter-governmental setting of the Review Conference. There were a number of new and innovative ideas that emerged during the conference discussions. It was particularly valuable to have the perspectives of the Review Conference President, Ambassador Rivero. For the above reasons, the conference should be considered a great success.

We, in Canada, wish the Programme for Promoting Nuclear Non-Proliferation all the success in its endeavours in the future, both at the 1990 Review Conference and in the movement towards the NPT extension decision in 1995. I hope that other Canadian officials responsible for non-proliferation will have the opportunity to participate in the Programme's future activities - particularly on the uniquely beautiful island of Guernsey.

Yours sincerely,

George Jacoby
